I really hate these "pay money to get something you'd get by just playing the game" things.

The fact that developers think their own game is so horrible that people should pay real world money to avoid playing it, is the most damning statement about a game I can imagine.. Doesn't work. Verified this by continuing play and searching multiple forums. Can't believe I wasted $3.. The XP I get is unbelievable!!! :). Very useful thing. With a good race online u can get 3000+ xp and in some cases in time attacks 4000.. just about. It helps leveling up. I usually level up about 5-8 levels every day during online.. Just leaving a review to say that this does work, contrary to what a negative review here says. Whether it is worth buying is for you to decide but I just tried it in an offline career race and it clearly says 50% XP boost added at the end (and it also works for online).

Also importantly, '50%' is VERY misleading because it doesn't do what it implies. It doesn't simply add 50% to the total XP you get for a race, as you would reasonably expect. It only adds 50% to the XP you get for your race finishing position, which is only a small amount compared to the overall. Codemasters could have very easily spelled out exactly how it works, but then maybe they wouldn't have sold so much, a bit like how they don't spell out that the DLC cars and tracks don't work in the offline career mode. As it is, it is arguably close to false or misleading advertising.
